PREFACE

The Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services maintains 24 agricultural inspection stations staffed by sworn law enforcement officers of the Office of Agricultural Law Enforcement. Eighteen of the inspection stations are located along a line referred to as the Florida agricultural production zone boundary. This boundary is roughly framed by the Suwannee and St. Marys Rivers in North Florida. The Suwannee River flows from the Okefenokee Swamp in Georgia and enters Florida just west of US 441 in Columbia County and continues southwest to its confluence with the Gulf of America near the town of Suwannee in Dixie County. The St. Marys River flows from the Okefenokee Swamp in an easterly direction to the Atlantic Ocean, forming a portion of the border between Georgia and Florida. The area south of this boundary comprises Florida's agricultural production zone.

The remaining two inspection stations are located on US 231 in Campbellton, Jackson County, and eastbound Interstate 10 in Pensacola, Escambia County.
